COLLEGE RALLY IN GYMNASIUM

Movement Among Students and Alumni to Serve Middlebury Men at the Front

Tuesday evening, June 5, a rally was held in the gym in the interest of Middlebury students who will go from this college into the military or naval service of the United States. As was stated on the posters which advertised the meeting, "One of America's most urgent calls to service is the proper care of our men on the firing line who will be deprived of home influences."

The meeting opened with the singing of our national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner." Miss Ruth Cann sang the verses and the audience joined in the chorus. Professor Sanford who presided over the rally made a few opening remarks. He said that in the Civil War there were not as many deaths resulting from fighting or from fevers as there were deaths which resulted indirectly from the habits formed while in the military service.

President Thomas was first called upon to speak. He emphasized the fact that men in military camps are always eager for messages from home, and hence are very susceptible to home influences. Amid the severe temptations of army life they need the wisest counsel and the warm sympathy of their friends to keep them steady.

Henry Chapman, who was engaged in Y. M. C. A. work with the Vermont regiment on the border last summer, spoke of the contrast between civil life and life in the army, and touched upon some of the evil influences to which soldiers are invariably exposed. He read part of a letter written by a former student of McGill University, now an officer in the Canadian army in active service in France. Before the war this young man was an unbeliever with regard to religious matters, but the letter indicated clearly that he had experienced a change of heart, and that even in the stress and storm of war men are keenly susceptible to religious influences.

Richard Buffum then outlined plans for definite work which might be done for the men at the front. This work will be in charge of a committee composed of representatives from the faculty, the Y. W. C. A., and the Y. M. C. A. The committee has its own organization and will act as a unit, aided by the Christian Associations of the college. The personnel of the committee is as follows: Prof. Sanford, chairman; Dean Wright, Dean Ross, Prof. Bonney, and Prof. Lawrence; Ruth Hesselgrave, Ruth Bryant, and Ruth Holland; Richard Buffum, Henry Chapman, and Cecil Plumb.

This committee plans to provide men who enlist from this college with Testaments if they have none already; to send them the college paper, and other literature which will be furnished by the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A.; to co-operate with the Y. M. C. A. secretaries at the training camps; and in general, to maintain a close personal touch

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION IN NEW ACTIVITY

The work of the Y. M. C. A. has necessarily been somewhat restricted on account of the small membership; nevertheless, a devoted few have plodded on and kept the work going in the face of all discouragements and difficulties.

Except for the social which was given in March for the benefit of Warren E. Bristol's work among the wounded French soldiers, the work has been mainly in the field of religious activity. The Sunday Bible classes, while not largely attended, were helpful to the few who did attend. Religious meetings have been held nearly every Sunday at the Case and Munger street schoolhouses, and have been greatly appreciated by the people of those districts who could not get to church in town conveniently.

Most important of all [illegible] recently inaugurated by the Christian associations of the college, of following up Middlebury students who enter the army or the navy, with the definite object of counteracting the immoral influences to which they will be subjected.

Stories from the battlefields of Europe show that even in the confusion and desolation of war men may still be susceptible to religious influences. Yet there is also the deplorable fact that many a man going out from among Christian surroundings and finding himself far from home ties all too easily falls a victim to the deadly vices which attend war and which often work more havoc than hostile bullets. Christian associations throughout the country are fully awake to this great peril and are bending all their energies toward conserving the spiritual welfare of our soldiers and sailors. The work begun in this col[illegible] a small part of the general [illegible], though it is concerned solely with Middlebury students.

NAVAL RESERVE LIFE DESCRIBED IN LETTER

Harry W. Hyde '17 Writes Interesting Account of Naval Training at Commonwealth Pier.

To the Editor of The Campus.

Dear Sir:—

Just a few words to the readers of the college paper so that they may have a more clear conception of the life in the Navy.

For the benefit of those who are not acquainted with Boston, I would say that Commonwealth Pier, where all the Middlebury boys are stationed, with the exception of Benedict '17 and Eastman '18 who have been transferred to Bumkin Island, is situated on Summer street extension which is east of the South Station. It is a very large cement building, at present accommodating 1800 young men, a great many of whom are college men. So far, I have met men from Williams, Bates, Cornell, Amherst, Minnesota, and Montana.

Our daily routine is something like this. We are aroused from our slumber at 5 a. m. and are given 15 minutes during which time we are to dress and sling up our hammocks. It certainly is a queer experience to sleep in a hammock, which is slung up about 7 feet from the floor. The most fun is getting in. The hammock consists of canvas and a mattress, no pillow. From 5:15 until 7:15 the time is spent in cleaning up. We are instructed in the correct method of folding our clothes so that they will take up the least possible room in our sea-bag. We are also instructed how to wash our clothes and sew. Mess call is sounded at 7:15. The rations so far have been very good. Of course we do not receive any pie or cake, but we get good, wholesome food, plenty of bread and potatoes, and large quantities of oat meal. At 8:15 the sound to "quarters" is given at which time everybody goes forward on the deck to his respective place and answers to the muster roll. After quarters we are taken out for drill by divisions, changing our drill every morning and afternoon throughout the week. The various drills are: —Flag signaling, infantry, artillery, knotting and splicing, physical training and seamanship. The drill period lasts until 11 o'clock which is mail time on board ship. After the mail has been distributed we prepare for dinner which is at 12 o'clock. We are not given much time after dinner before quarters is sounded and we take up drill as in the forenoon. At 4:30 the "liberty call" is sounded, and if you have not been disobedient in any respect, you may go ashore. This occurs every other night, and every two weeks you are given a 48 hour liberty provided you have observed all the disciplinary rules which I can assure you are numerous. You must dress just so, your neckerchief properly tied, your hat squarely on your head, nothing showing in your one pocket, shoes shined, and clothes brushed. You are inspected as to all these details before you are allowed to pass the outside guard. If you do not go ashore you have the privilege of

EDITORIAL.

The year of 1916–'17 has been unique in the history of the college. In some sense, every year is unique in that it presents an ever varying and kaleidoscopic change in the growth of the institution, but not in this sense merely may it be said of this year, for the war has added a strange and fundamentally new atmosphere to our college life. When the Civil War broke out, practically every man in college enlisted in the volunteer service of the nation, but the situation now is altogether different. The necessity of maintaining the integrity of the higher institutions of learning throughout the country during the trying period of hostilities and the novel system of selective draft replacing the time-honored volunteer method have contributed to an entirely new attitude on the part of the students in regard to their duty in the world crisis. There is a strong feeling now that unless called by some special personal qualification or by the draft each one has a certain duty to perform in completing his education and thereby becoming a more useful citizen for a future but no less urgent need. The disastrous consequences of sending the flower of the European nations to the front at the first call for troops has taught a much needed lesson to America. The point that we wish to emphasize is the result of this change in viewpoint which bids fair to insure for Middlebury a prosperous though somewhat depleted condition, so far as the enrollment of men is concerned, with the opening of college in September. A large percentage of the three lower classes will probably return in the fall except in the cases of those individuals who are definitely called elsewhere.

The life of the college has been very materially influenced by the occupancy of the new buildings on the upper campus whose added refinements and adaptations to modern ideas of scientific living have added a certain dignity to the more informal side of the college. The Mead Memorial Chapel has had an influence which cannot be adequately measured or accurately defined, yet it is one of the most potent, we believe, among an innumerable list. The resultant is felt in an unmistakable sense of increased substantiality. The aesthetic influence of the chimes is a decided factor in the uniqueness of our newer college life. It is almost certain that the music they have produced will be one of the most pleasant memories which the departing student will carry with him when finally the Alma Mater becomes indeed only a memory. Few colleges in the country possess this feature on their campus.

We cannot fail to mention the influence of our athletic achievements. Middlebury holds a far more honorable position in that realm than has ever been afforded her. While we hope for better things to come in the succeeding years, we have much to be proud of in the successes of this year. State supremacy in football and track, and an excellent record in baseball are prizes long coveted but heretofore withheld.

The Middlebury Campus has had its share of adventure. Unaccustomed to startling innovations, it has followed persistently an entirely new course which has proved successful. Unusual circumstances have made the way difficult, but that very fact makes its permanence all the more sure. The theory that the best results can alone be attained by a recognition of merit and an opportunity for its exercise has been thoroughly tested in the past year and vindicated. Weaknesses in our adaptation of the credit system have come to light, yet the main idea remains intact. The whole experiment has led directly and not unconsciously to a new and still more radical departure, and here again we are confident of success, provided, however, we are permitted a fair trial. The student body has been educated to the idea that Middlebury needs a weekly publication in order adequately to represent her as she is, and it furthermore believes that as a unit it should support the publication. Its wish has been conveyed to the faculty in the form of a petition, and we expect it will go through. Such an establishment is worthy of a more substantial recognition than it has heretofore received, inasmuch as the interests of the whole college are served by it. The work of publication is of a thoroughly practical and educational value, and on this basis the Board has asked for regular college credits for the four highest positions, subject to the supervision of the faculty and the recommendation, in each individual case, of the head of the department of instruction under which the work falls.

The above indicates a few of our lines of development, but it can scarcely measure their real significance. Any prediction beyond a very conservative statement would be idle conjecture. The interference of the war on some of the former currents of college life has made all predictions of little weight. As we go out from our college halls into the succeeding months of uncertainty we can only hope that the best in our endeavors will be taken up and carried to a successful issue by those who follow us. Faith in a cause and determination to persevere in it are the first essentials to success.

To the class of 1917 we bid farewell and wish for you abundant rewards for whatever you have put into our college life. To all, we would urge an entire consecration to the highest duties which call out the manhood of the present generation. The grim necessity of war will tear asunder many who would otherwise reunite with us in the fall. In the service of humanity may you live or die as become men.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF WAR COMMITTEE

Committee to Serve Students in Military and Naval Service Outlines Work

The Middlebury War Service Committee wishes to make the following announcement to the college and alumni.

The committee was organized on May 31 under the auspices of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations of Middlebury College; it is not, however, to be confused with these organizations since it is an independent unit formed for the express purpose of serving Middlebury students in the Army and Navy.

The committee represents the entire college and is under the direction of Professor Myron R. Sanford. The personnel is as follows:

Chairman, Professor Myron R. Sanford
Secretary, Richard H. Buffum '18
Treasurer, Ruth M. Bryant '18
For the Faculty:
Dean Charles B. Wright
Dean Eleanor S. Ross
Professor Luther I. Bonney
Professor Henry W. Lawrence
For the Y. W. C. A.:
Ruth A. Hesselgrave '18
Ruth G. Holland '19
For the Y. M. C. A.:
Henry H. Chapman '18
Cecil Plumb 19.

The work will be carried on in collaboration with the world-wide movement of the International Y. M. C. A., concentrating its efforts, however, on Middlebury men. The purpose of the committee is to counteract to the greatest possible degree the influences coincident with war service which tend to undermine the spiritual and moral natures of the men. This will be done by supplying them (1) with Testaments which can be conveniently carried, (2) with llterature from home and college which will include the college paper and any other material of a suitable nature that may be available from time to time, (3) with personal letters which will maintain their interest and furnish inspiration and good cheer in hours of suffering and despondency. The value of personal letters is too well known to require much comment. Deprived of home influences and threatened by the gravest dangers, a warm message from a friend is of inestimable value.

A canvass has been taken of the entire college to supply the committee with sufficient funds to meet the immediate demands for getting the work started. The sum thus raised is far from the necessary amount, and the alumni are urged to contribute as they are able. An organized campaign for raising the necesary funds will be initiated in the early summer. A detailed statement of all receipts and expenditures of the committee will be published from time to time. Any information which will assist the committee in its work will be heartily appreciated. All communications should be addressed to the chairman at Middlebury.

R. H. BUFFUM.
Secretary to the Committee.

with Middlebury soldiers and sailors throughout the war.

Ruth Hesselgrave spoke briefly of the part which the women of the college could take in this work, and urged their hearty co-operation.

Dean Wright, the last speaker of the evening, testified to the great value of home influences upon men who were far from home ties, and cited some of his own experiences as a civil engineer in the far Northwest soon after he left college. He also referred to the fact that the work of the Middlebury War Service Committee is only a specialized branch of the great work being done by the International Y. M. C. A., not only in this country but in Europe as well; and declared that that work represented the highest and worthiest type of Christian service.

In the course of the program several of the students rendered musical selections, and the meeting closed with the singing of "America."

1800 MEN RECEIVE ACTIVE TRAINING AT HARVARD

Letter from Rowland Ricker '17 Describes Modern Methods

Thursday, June 7, the Harvard University Reserve Officers' Training Corps completed its first month of intensive training. During the course of this time over 1200 men, members of 54 eastern colleges as well as numerous non-collegiates of New England, have been given military instruction in the primary duties of an infantry officer.

Each man entering this corps is placed first in the recruiting detachment where he remains usually about a week. He is taught the manual, close order formation, and especially military discipline. The private is always looking forward to the date when he is transferred to a regular company. His first days of drill in the recruit detachment are rather tiresome and monotonous.

There are three batallions of four companies each. Each company has its own lecture rooms and separate schedule for the week. Our day begins with recitation at 8 a. m. to 9 a. m. and usually ends at 5:30. Three evenings a week are taken up with lectures by the French Mission. Usually the fellows can keep awake, but it is not out of the ordinary to see several taking a nap. The morning work includes physical training, bayonet practice, and rifle practice. The afternoon work is recitation 1:30 to 2:30, signaling, using both semaphore and wig-wag codes, squad and platoon drill and company formations.

One day a week, two companies do topographical work which includes map reading, orientation, road, position and outpost sketching. This is very interesting work and is a sort of a vacation for the company from the monotony of the week. Each company has to dig trenches one day a week. The practical instruction in intrenching, mine warfare, hand grenades, barbed-wire entanglements and other work especially adapted to warfare on the western front is under the supervision of the French officers. I would say that the French Mission is sent here by the French government with all expenses paid. The trenches when completed will be identical with trenches used in the present war. At present we have three lines of trenches. Each private becomes very efficient with the pick and shovel.

Each battalion goes to the state rifle range at Wakefield and remains there for rifle practice one week. It is a sixteen mile hike and is made under war conditions. At Wakefield the men sleep under canvas in wall tents formerly used by the militia. Three machine guns have been donated to the corps. Each man has an opportunity to use these guns and set them up. These guns were for the Russian Government, but when our desire for them was known they were immediately donated.

The theoretical instruction includes the following subjects: Infantry Drill Regulations, Small Problems for Infantry, Field Service Regulations, Small Arms Firing Manual, Company Administration, International Law, Military Law, and Psychology of War. The recitations are held in the various university buildings. Hour examinations are held on the subjects covered each week.

The men at present live in the numerous university dormitories and eat in the most convenient place. About June 20 the entire corps will be moved into barracks where they will live the rest of the period of training.

The corps has been reviewed and inspected by General Edwards, commanding the Northeastern Department. General Edwards was highly pleased with the corps and spoke in complimentary terms of the appearance of the men, saying that with continued training many of them would make excellent officers. I hope that this letter may explain to all our task at Harvard.

Yours sincerely,
ROWLAND V. RICKER.

using the Y. M. C. A rooms which are situated here on deck. They are doing great work among the sailors, such as providing athletic contests, entertainments and all good reading matter. Supper is served "a la carte", I mean "grab it", at 5:30. After supper quarters are sounded again and we answer to the roll call, and at the same time the anchor-watch is given out; that is, 8 men are chosen to do guard duty outside of their division, each man doing an hour throughout the night. As I said before, we are entertained in the evening by the Y. M. C. A. They give us moving pictures twice a week, boxing and wrestling tournaments, musical numbers, and deck games. Tattoo is sounded at 8:55 and taps at 9:00; this completes the day. Everybody feels like resting at this time, yet I don't believe that we are worked as hard as the boys at Newport and the Great Lakes, but I'm sure it is hard enough for a start. All the Middlebury boys here send their best wishes to the students of Middlebury and hope for their success.

Respectfully yours,
HARRY W. HYDE.

UNION ELECTS OFFICERS

Last Meeting of the Year—Forrest G. Myrick Elected President

Tuesday evening, June 5, the College Union held its last meeting of the year. The chief business taken up at that time was the annual election of officers to fill the vacancies which will be made by the graduation of the class of 1917. Forrest G. Myrick was elected president to succeed Dan O. Mason. In retiring from office, Mason spoke a few words of thanks for the privilege and honor which had been given him of presiding over the most influential organization of college life at Middlebury. He regretted that much had not been accomplished during his short term of office, but he hoped the Union would go ahead and assume the place of dignity which such an organization should hold in our college life.

Other officers elected at the meeting are: Vice-president, Walter Anderson; treasurer, Roscoe Dake; secretary, Henry Chapman; chairman of social committee, Donald Belden; chairman of finance committee, Edward Huntley. It was voted that the chairmen of committees choose the members to serve under them. It was further agreed that, on account of the unsettled conditions, the election of the Senior Council be carried over until September.

BASEBALL SEASON REVIEW

Middlebury Wins 6, Loses 6, and Ties 1 in 13 Innings.

With the two to one defeat at the hands of the Williams College team two weeks ago, Middlebury College baseball team ended its schedule for this season. Out of thirteen games played six were won, six were lost, and one resulted in a thirteen inning tie. The number of close scores shows that Middlebury is playing the game well, and is coming into the limelight of college baseball.

The schedule this year included a number of teams which Middlebury has never met before, and which heretofore have been regarded as too strong for our teams. After the splendid games played this season, Middlebury has now a right to feel proud of the record made against colleges which draw their teams from a much larger student body.

Seven of the scheduled games were cancelled because so many colleges found it necessary to suspend athletics on account of diminished numbers in attendance and because of military drill. Middlebury, however, carried out its schedule as far as was possible, although a few of the varsity men left college for military and agricultural pursuits. The games cancelled were with Hamilton, Colgate, Norwich, Syracuse, Dartmouth, and Connecticut Aggies.

Following is a brief summary of the games played::

Middlebury	3,	St. Michael's College 0.
"	0,	Springfield 1.
"	11,	Trinity 3.
"	6,	Penn. State 5.

It has been found necessary to cancel the game scheduled with the alumni during commencement week. A game has been arranged between the faculty and the senior class in its stead.
